

The Happiest of Meals

This was very much a lockdown tradition that started when we had no choice but to make our own fun at home. But even out of lockdown, there are still plenty of days when you're feeling stuck at home and just need something different and fun to do with the kids. If today is one of those days, why not give this idea a whirl?

If your kids are old enough, then you can get them involved in cutting and sticking – and even decorating – their meal containers while you crack on with whatever you need to be doing. Or surprise younger kids with your wonderful homemade creation – made so much easier with this printable template (see QR code).

You'll need (per child)

- 2 sheets A4 thin card (colour of your choice)
- Scissors
- Double-sided sticky tape to make the boxes
- Chicken/veggie nuggets OR a burger and bun
- Chips of your choice: we like fries for authenticity!
- OPTIONAL: a small toy (keep an eye out for offers, or odds and ends that you pick up in the charity shops)
- OPTIONAL: any leftover sauce packets you've saved

If you don't have double-sided sticky tape, a glue stick and some clothes pegs to hold the boxes together while the glue dries, works too.

What to do – to prep your box

Follow the QR code and download your printable box templates. You'll find templates for burger boxes, trays for nuggets and containers for chips, so take your children's orders before printing what you need!

Cut around the solid lines, and fold any dashed lines.

If your card is fairly thick, a quick score with some scissors against a ruler will make for a much neater end product.

Top Tip!

Tape or glue your containers together and either set them aside or pass to your children to decorate with stickers. If you want the kids to colour their boxes, I recommend doing this before assembling.
